Editorial Foreword

It is our great pleasure to present the latest issue of English Journal Antartika, Volume 3, Number 2, December 2025. This edition features a diverse range of scholarly works that contribute to the ongoing development of research in linguistics, literature, English language teaching, and English for Specific Purposes.

The articles in this issue reflect current academic discussions and highlight innovative approaches in the field of English studies. We believe that the insights offered by the authors will not only enrich the body of knowledge but also inspire further research and pedagogical advancement among educators, practitioners, and researchers.

We would like to express our sincere gratitude to all contributors, reviewers, and editorial members for their dedication and hard work. Their commitment ensures the quality and integrity of this publication. We also extend our appreciation to our readers for their continued support.

We hope this issue offers valuable perspectives and serves as a meaningful reference for future academic endeavours.

Happy reading!
